

January 25, 2017

Two New Research Administration Resources

The Office of Research Administration has created two new resources to assist the research community with determining the difference between a gift and a grant and between a subrecipient and a contractor/consultant. Below are links to these two resources:

- Gift vs. Grant: Often individuals receive money and have difficulty differentiating whether it is a gift or a grant. The criteria for determining whether funds are categorized as a gift or grant sometimes overlap and require evaluation based on a number of characteristics listed in this document.
- Subrecipient vs. Contractor/Consultant: The criteria for determining whether an entity is considered a subrecipient or a contractor/consultant is defined in 2 CFR 200.330 and requires evaluation based on a number of characteristics listed in this document.

These resources are readily available in our Grants Management Toolbox page.

Additional resources concerning subcontracting to another entity are available in our Pre-Award Contracts page. Please visit the ORA website at ora.miami.edu for more information.