ClinCard Pilot Project is Expanding

The Office of Research Administration (ORA) has managed the ClinCard debit card as a pilot program for the last year. The ClinCard is a reloadable debit card for research studies and is the preferred method of paying research participants for their participation.

ORA is expanding the program and making it available to the University of Miami research community, with a target implementation date before the end of the year.

The ClinCard will be used to reimburse research study participants paid from UM accounts. No other usage is available at this time.

We have scheduled information sessions, to explain how the program works, along with guidelines and rules. We will be answering questions and accepting applications for participation during the session. The information sessions will be followed by training.

To register, please go to ULearn and search for ClinCard. Three (3) sessions are being offered.
